QUININE AND PE-RU-NA. The Two Great Malarial Remedies Compared.

Nothing is more clearly demonstrated than that there are two distinct forms of malaria, which, for want of better names, may be denominated acute and chronic. It has been recently shown that the parasites which cause malaria are different in the acute and chronic forms. The acute form is commonly known as fever and ague, or chills and fever. This form of the disease is too well known in malarious districts to need description, and is generally curable by large doses of quinine, though this is not so favorable a remedy as Peruna. The chronic form of malaria is, by no means, so well understood as the symnog many friends departed conversation, their many friends departed wishing them a joyous voyage in the tuture.

This form of the disease is too well known in malarious districts to need description, and is generally curable by large doses of quinine, though this is not so favorable a remedy as Peruna. The chronic form of malaria is, by no means, so well understood as the symptoms are hardly stood, as the symptoms are hardly ever exactly alike in any two cases, and it is rarely if ever, cumble by taking quinine. Each case presents slightly dif-terent symptoms, the most common ones being dull hestache, sallow complexion, furred tongue, bad taste poor digestion, shivering feelings, hot flashes, cold feet and hands, and constant, tired feelings. Quinine will not cure cases of chronic majaria as above described. Peruna is the only specific for such cases. Pertuna is sure to cure, leaves the system with no derangement, and produces no drug habit hard to leave off, which quinine will do. Peru na is for sale at most drug stores, accompanied with directions for use; but those who are using it should send for the Family Physician No. 1, a treatise on majaria, sent free by the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, O.
